Wiki Search Engine – Report

a. Student IDs and emails

   208196576 lironzv@post.bgu.ac.il

   314807496 ofirbel@post.bgu.ac.il

b. A link to a Github repo with the code

   https://github.com/lironzvi/WikiSearchEngine/actions/new

c. A link to a Google Storage Bucket, where all indexing data you calculated resides and is publicly accessible. Instructions for making your bucket public are here.

   https://console.cloud.google.com/storage/browser/all_data_bucket_new

d. List all index files with human-readable sizes, pasted in an appendix at the end of your report. This does not count towards the page limit. You can use the command `gsutil du -ch gs://BUCKET_NAME` to generate this listing or `du -ch LOCAL_DIR` if you store index data locally.

   In the end of the report

e. A description of key experiments you ran, how you evaluated them, and the key findings/takeaways.

   At the start we began with the naïve solution to the search function.

   We implanted the search function using the naïve implementation of cosine similarity, which took a lot of time to run and didn't stand in our timeout of 35 seconds.
   Later, we understood that this solution wasn't good enough, so we followed the guidelines in lecture 3.

   When coding the search engine logic we starts as well with the basics, which did not qualified with our instructions, so we started to efficient things.
   We also decided to go with another set of stemmed indexes, and BM25 ranking scores.

   As we did that our score almost doubled and the time was less than 35 sec.

f. A graph showing the engine performance for each major version of your implementation.

g. A graph showing the engine's average retrieval time for each major version of your implementation.

h. Qualitative evaluation of the top 10 results for one query where your engine performed really well and one query where your engine did not perform well. Describe what worked well and what didn't work so well. What is the dominant factor behind the poor result? What can be done about it?

We noticed a pattern in which each query with a collection of unique words, gave most times better results than the queries with more common words such as, "India" , "world", "kids" etc. We believe that our engine's default weights effected the results.
